

Recognizing Caregiving Stress in Employees

Why it Matters

Modern life is full of hassles, deadlines, frustrations, and demands. For many people, stress is so commonplace that it has become a way of life. But when one is constantly running in emergency mode, as is often the case for a family caregiver, the mind and body pay the price.

Long-term exposure to stress can lead to serious health problems, as chronic stress disrupts nearly every system in the body. It can:

- Raise blood pressure
- Suppress the immune system
- Increase the risk of heart attack and stroke
- Speed up the aging process
- And long term, stress can even rewire the brain, leaving employees more vulnerable to anxiety and depression

The result of long-term exposure to stress for a company's employees will be more absences and increased healthcare benefit utilization.

Recognizing the Signs of Stress

When under pressure, behavior can present as:

- Talking too fast or too loud
- Yawning
- Fiddling and twitching, nail biting, grinding teeth, drumming fingers, pacing, etc.

- Bad moods: irritability, being critical, overly sensitive replies, anger and irrationality when responding to problems and people
- Being unreasonably negative
- Making less realistic judgments
- Inability to concentrate
- Difficulty making decisions
- Being more forgetful
- Making more mistakes
- Being more accident prone
- Disorganization, confusion and worry
- Changing work habits
- Increased absenteeism
- Neglect of personal appearance and personal hygiene

The Greatest Protection Against Stress and Reduced Productivity?

A strong support network is always going to be the greatest protection against stress. Through an eldercare program such as Atlanta Home Care Partners provides, we can help alleviate some of the responsibilities and pressures of family caregiving through providing some respite from care.

Adding eldercare services to a benefits package will enhance the value of an employer and help any employees who have eldercare responsibilities affecting their work. Call Atlanta Home Care Partners today to learn more.

Sources: The Language of Emotional Intelligence by Jeanne Segal, Ph.D., eHow, Mind Tools, Help Guide, Natural Health Information Center